STAND UP TO RACISM

1 RESTORE WELCOMES NEO-NAZIS & FASCISTS

Restore is full of antisemites and known fascists.

During Restore's September 2026 Holborn and St Pancras campaign, Michael Newland, the former treasurer for the neo-Nazi British National Party, was photographed distributing literature and addressing activists. Callum Barker, formerly active in the neo-Nazi Homeland Party, also appeared in campaign material. Restore candidate Tyler Johnson's official proposer, Patrick McGinnis, had published a video blaming "Jewish ideas" for Britain's problems.

Elliot Lowe is a rabid neo-Nazi who has been active in Restore Manchester and was pictured with Rupert Lowe.

2 RESTORE WANTS A WHITE BRITAIN

Restore's buzzword is "remigration", which is a code for ethnic cleansing. It means removing those who fail the test of "white Britishness".

Some Restore figures claim Jewish people are not English, suggesting they think they should be deported too. Restore policy papers say that ethnic minorities have roots in Britain that are "shallow by comparison" with the "native majority".

Restore's official immigration policy proposes deporting legally resident foreign nationals if they are judged not to have integrated. It states: "If that means millions go, then millions go."

3 RESTORE WANTS TO "UTTERLY CRUSH" DEMOCRACY

Senior Restore official Charlie Downes has said his party would "utterly crush" its political opponents if it achieved office: "'The Left' as it currently exists simply will not exist anymore."

He added: "I am not interested in their 'right to protest' or whatever else. They hate us, they are enemies of European civilisation, they will be destroyed."

Rupert Lowe has promised that a Restore government would prosecute "hundreds, if not thousands" of civil servants.

4 RESTORE IS RIFE WITH SEXISM

One prominent woman in Restore left the party after senior figures allegedly told her "women shouldn't be in politics".

A party organiser, Nick Seton-Rogers, resigned citing "a deeply misogynistic" and "very nasty underbelly" in Restore. A party election candidate, Jez Hermer, described seeing overt misogyny in forums associated with Restore.

Restore figures argue for huge restrictions on the right to access abortion.

5 RESTORE HATES THE WORKING CLASS

Restore wants to slash £178 billion from public spending by freezing working-age benefits and cutting large areas of government expenditure.

At the same time, Restore proposes around £155 billion of tax cuts to help the rich, including reducing corporation tax.

Restore's plan is to divide ordinary people with racism and then push through major attacks on the working class.
